Understanding Return of Capital (ROC): Tax Implications and Examples

What Is Return of Capital (ROC)?

Return of capital (ROC) is a payment, or return, received from an investment that is not considered a taxable event and is not taxed as income.

Return of capital reduces an investor's adjusted cost basis and is not considered capital gains from the investment. It's nontaxable until the cost basis is reduced to zero, at which point any subsequent return will be taxable as a capital gain.

Common ROC scenarios or investments include retirement accounts and real estate investment trusts (REITs).

While return of capital is a nontaxable repayment of your original investment, income and capital gains are taxable earnings and profits from that investment. This distinction is important for tax planning, because it affects when and how much tax you pay.
